

As a concerned Indiana citizen, I am writing to express concern over the current challenges to Indiana's Do Not Call list. I believe that if the CBA is successful my privacy and quality of life will be compromised. As an individual who has spent the last ten years working in the banking industry (only recently leaving to care for my newborn), I know that banks will call their customers repeatedly to try and get them to buy their products. They are as bad as any other telemarketer. If I have a financial need, I know where to go for answers. I do not need them calling me. Please do not preempt Indiana's Do Not Call list with the weaker federal statute.
